The blessed inhabitants of this heavenly kingdom; those millions of millions of angels, of whom the prophet Daniel having seen God Almighty in a vision, tells us, Dun. 7. That thousands of thousands administered unto him, and tens of thousands of. hundreds of thousands si odd before him: that infmite multitude of saints and martyrs, and other servants of God of both sexes, gathered out of all nations, tribes and tongues; and above t-em all, the Blessed Virgin mother of God, queen of saints and angels. their number is innumerable. But O! who can expect the happiness of enjoying this blessed company they are all most noble, most glorious. most wise, most holy; they art all of blood royal. all kings and queens, all children and heirs of the most High God. ever beautiful and eVer young, crowned ith wreathes of immortal glory, and shining much brighter than t. he sun. Their love and charity for one another is more than can be conceived; they have all but one heart, one will, and one soul; so the joy and satisfaction of every one is multiplied to as many as there are blessed souls and angels in heaven, by the inexpressible delight that each one takes in the happiness of all and every one of the rest. Christians, let us imitate their virtue here, that we may come to their happy society hereafter, and with them eternally sing to our God, the immortal songs of Sion. Consider,...
