Excerpt: . . . 11 dle school, in high school, and I think there are some creative ways to do that. A simple government approach there was a conversation with the mayor and I said, we will open up our labs if you will open up your schools. We have constructed labs and we have now put about 90 percent of the 8th graders in the City of Cambridge through courses in our own laboratories. The goal, just to excite a few of these kids, and then second, also to make sure we are excit-ing all the kids. So it was, traditionally, you see a lot of, as you go through the graduate programs and what not, get into secondary education, you see plenty of Northern European descent, plenty of Asian, but we are not seeing the black community and we are not seeing the Latino community and we are able to get more of that going. Second, we have had great success with some help from govern-ment funding on really setting up and enabling partnerships be-tween the industry and the community colleges or the universities for workforce retraining. So where we see a shift in the industry base to really put together programs that are going to be appro-priate for a broader range of people, to retrain them and move them from one industry to another. We have had great success with that in North Carolina as they have moved from software and other high...
