Excerpt: . . . prisons in At this southernmost port of Morocco, we discovered an ex-governor of a Province who had been in prison for more than thirty years, having been incarcerated during the lifetime of the grandfather of the present Sultan. This poor man is said to have been a good and just governor, and that he owed his imprisonment to his reluctance to carry out the cruel orders of his superiors. For this cause he has been allowed to languish so long in prison; in fact, he has now become almost forgotten, and would starve were it not for the kindness of some of the European residents. We laid the case of this unfortunate prisoner before their Excellencies Sir J. Drummond Hay and the French and German Ambassadors, all of whom declared ignorance of his existence. It is hoped that they will now do something to...
