Excerpt: .oblique line, up thus /, then join the curved r to the last point of the former; thus f. Ex. J t-r-r for terror, p. Rr may also be expressed by making the simple oblique line twice, as in // tr-rnt, for torrent, fyc. s. S is represented by a short perpendicular line, thus, always commencing at the top, as in K, sml, it-sng, c. S, when silent, may be omitted, as in the words corps, demesne, hie, island, puisne, viscount, c. S has frequently the sound of sh, and must in such cases be substituted by the latter; writing Asha, for Asia; Prsha, for Persia, c. A distinct character is assigned to represent the letters sh when occurring together, for which, see exposition of the double consonants. Ss may be expressed by making the character for twice separately, thus ll, or by drawing...
