The ambition is still, however, cherished for Lord Rosebery--he never cherishes any ambition for himself--that when the reunion of the Liberal Party takes place, he will be selected for the leadership in succession to Mr. Gladstone, as being the man who divides it least. But what if this reunion never takes place? Moreover, if it does coine about at all, it will come through the Separatists giving way to the Unionists, not through the Unionists giving way to the Separatists. In that case, will it not be said of Lord Rosebery, as it is said by his present colleagues, that he has not borne the burden and heat of the day? It is, of course, possible that Lord Rosebery may some day be offered the...
